
SASB Disclosure

The Sustainability Accounting Standards Board (SASB) has developed a set of industry-specific standards to help businesses identify, manage and communicate financially material sustainability information for their investors and other stakeholders.

BMO published its first SASB disclosure in 2019. Since then, there has been accelerated interest in and adoption of these standards by the investor and analyst community and corporate issuers globally. Our 2020 SASB disclosure cites metrics from the standards that are relevant to our operating groups and lending activity, including asset management and custody, consumer finance, commercial banks, investment banking and brokerage, and mortgage finance.

BMO conducts periodic vulnerability scans utilizing an industry-leading software solution. As per industry best practices, an independent partner also carries out external penetration testing at least once a year. Identified vulnerabilities are verified, risk-rated, tracked, reported and monitored for timely remediation. Approach to addressing data security risks and vulnerabilities <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • BMO is committed to keeping its customer information secure while also providing highly professional and reliable business services. The bank follows cyber security best practices and maintains an IT environment that meets international standards and expectations. To address the rapidly changing security threat landscape, BMO utilizes resilient, agile technologies and makes significant investments in the continuous improvement of its information security position. • BMO is also committed to building and reinforcing the soundest possible foundation by providing appropriate management support and instilling a culture of security awareness across the organization. This involves: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - A three-lines-of-defence model for effective risk management and compliance monitoring. - Appropriate segregation of duties, organizational structures, reporting lines, authorities and security responsibilities. - A dedicated security risk governance function that applies risk metrics to monitor the current state of our operations and risk profile. • BMO continuously monitors and mitigates information security risks. This includes implementation of the following: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Comprehensive policies and standards for information security and privacy. - Secure processes for the classification, handling and storage of information. - End-point protection and network security. - An annual mandatory security awareness training program for all employees. - Frequent reporting to our executives, external regulators, and internal and external auditors. - Self-assessment against recognized frameworks and process benchmarking. Trends observed in type, frequency and origination of attacks on data security and information systems <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • No single area is more vulnerable to attack than any other area. 		Data and system security efforts related to new and emerging cyber threats and attack vectors <ul style="list-style-type: none"> The BMO Financial Crimes Unit is responsible for managing all aspects of cyber security, information security, internal and external fraud, and physical security. The unit combines existing capabilities from across the enterprise in an integrated central function, and uses an industry-leading fusion centre model to enhance both intelligence-gathering and response recovery. As per industry best practices, a well-qualified Cyber Threat Intelligence and Analytics team is also in place, which proactively monitors emerging threats that could impact BMO's employees, processes, technology and customers by gathering and analyzing threat information from various commercial, industry, government, internal and open sources. The team also conducts threat hunting on a regular basis to identify potential malicious activity. We continually enhance our cyber security controls in alignment with threat intelligence forecasts. We continue to make additional investments in defensive technology, talent and processes in order to prevent, or detect and manage, cyber security threats within BMO. These measures include benchmarking and review of best practices across the banking and cyber security industries, evaluation of the effectiveness of our key controls and development of new controls as needed, with ongoing investments in both technology and human resources. In addition, senior management reviews BMO's information security management system at regular intervals to ensure its ongoing suitability, adequacy and effectiveness, and makes timely decisions for continuous improvement. Degree to which BMO's approach is aligned with external standards or frameworks and/or legal or regulatory frameworks for managing data security <ul style="list-style-type: none"> BMO is a highly regulated organization and undergoes many independent reviews on a periodic basis. Leadership accountability

- Leadership accountability and advocacy are critical to success. At BMO, our leaders' advocacy for diversity and inclusion starts at the top, with CEO Darryl White, who is a vocal champion of inclusivity. On his first day as our new CEO in November 2017, Mr. White signed on as a Catalyst CEO Champion for Change and affirmed his commitment to "reviewing and improving the pipeline of women of diverse backgrounds for advancement and empowering them with a strong support system." He also signed the Catalyst Accord 2022, pledging to work to increase the average percentage of women on boards and in executive positions in corporate Canada to 30% or higher by 2022. In 2020, Mr. White signed the BlackNorth CEO Pledge.
- In 2012, we established the Leadership Committee for Inclusion and Diversity (LCID), an enterprise-wide committee of 25 senior executives representing diversity at BMO, which oversees our progress toward achieving our diversity and inclusion (D&I) goals and advocates for inclusive practices. The committee is co-chaired by a member of BMO's Executive Committee who is appointed by the CEO. LCID establishes the strategic priorities that define our direction, along with a number of specific action plans and ambitious workforce goals. A D&I update is presented to the Board of Directors on an annual basis.
- BMO's D&I governance model is built on this leadership accountability, and combines a leader-led approach with a grassroots approach that is spearheaded by the 3,500 members of our 14 Enterprise Resource Groups (ERGs). Each ERG is sponsored by a senior executive.

Representation goals

- We set specific and ambitious goals across our organization by identifying gaps, removing barriers and then holding everyone – leaders and managers – accountable for moving BMO forward. We know that what gets measured gets done, so diversity goals are included every year in the performance objectives for the Group Head of each business. Since 2018, Diversity Dashboards have been included in the meeting materials for Performance Committee meetings. In these quarterly meetings 46 of BMO's most senior leaders, chaired by the CEO, discuss and report on critical business goals and results. The Dashboards show how diverse employee segments in each line of business are represented. They ensure that diversity and inclusion remains a top priority and clarify accountability for our senior leaders.
- In 2020, we announced new five-year diversity goals to address gaps affecting Black, Indigenous, People of Colour, Latino and LGBTQ2+ employees, customers and communities. Our Zero Barriers to Inclusion 2025 goals represent an ambitious expansion of the multi-year diversity strategy we set in 2017. New benchmarks and plans include doubling enterprise-wide representation of Black senior leaders, accelerating Indigenous talent strategies, introducing an LGBTQ2+ representation goal, and sustaining a strong gender equity position.

Culture of inclusion

- We make our leaders and employees aware of the value of inclusivity, and we share practical actions and behaviours to help build an inclusive environment. For example, in 2016, we launched Learn from Difference (LFD), a multi-year initiative focused on building inclusive leadership capabilities, equipping leaders with strategies to mitigate the effects of unconscious bias and creating a more inclusive environment for colleagues, customers and the community. Phase one centred on an introductory e-learning course on diversity and inclusion. Within three months, more than 80% of managers had completed the course, and 97% of those managers felt confident in their ability to apply what they had learned in everyday business decisions. Creating an inclusive work environment is a responsibility shared by everyone at BMO, and in 2019, we expanded the LFD program to all employees and launched phase two, Learn from Difference for All (LFDA). In 2020, more than 80% of all colleagues completed the new LFDA program, building a culture of inclusion and belonging for all. See page 38 of the 2020 Sustainability Report and PAS (Diversity and Inclusion).
- To ensure BMO employees, and in particular Black employees, were feeling supported during the heightened period of racial injustice protests in 2020, we launched a new internal website offering racial injustice educational materials. It includes a guide that provides background for understanding recent issues of racial injustice in the Black community, followed by a conversation guide to support further conversations across the organization on race and what we can all do to make sure everyone is valued.
- BMO's leadership programs include a robust module focused on inclusive leadership capabilities and what managers can do to ensure all employees feel valued, respected and heard. As we build virtual offerings in response to COVID-19, diversity, inclusion and inclusive leadership capability continue to be an important part of the leadership curriculum.
- In 2020, our Zero Barriers to Inclusion 2025 strategy for colleagues, customers and community led to a series of branch huddles focused on cultural sensitivity. Across 900 branches in Canada, more than 8,000 branch employees and leaders participated.

See page 38 of the 2020 Sustainability Report and PAS (Diversity and Inclusion).

Talent practices

- Each year, as part of our Leadership Planning program, we identify employees with the potential to take on more senior roles in the organization and prepare succession slates for key roles.

In integrating a consideration of ESG factors, BMO GAM tailors its approach to each specific investment strategy and asset class in order to ensure that the resulting analyses are relevant and meaningful for each investment process. Elements of this approach include: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Screening: BMO GAM offers a range of screened funds for clients who wish to link investment performance to a clear set of ethical and sustainability principles. To determine the eligibility of companies for investment under these strategies, we have developed stringent criteria that are published on our website and are subject to oversight by our Responsible Investment Advisory Council. We review the criteria and indicators on a regular basis to ensure they reflect evolving responses to critical issues, emerging issues, changes in regulation and other developments. Sustainability funds must meet a set of common criteria regarding minimum sustainability performance. Each fund publishes its own investment policy outlining its respective specifications. Thematic: BMO GAM offers a number of thematic investment solutions which seek to generate returns by investing in companies that are working to meet specific sustainability challenges. These include the Women in Leadership Fund and the Sustainable Opportunities Global Equity Fund. Engagement: Our SDG Engagement Global Equity Fund has a mandate based on intensive engagement to improve the long-term performance of investee companies and their contribution to achieving the Sustainable Development Goals. Integration: As a long-term investor, we seek to build an understanding of the fundamental factors shaping the risks and opportunities facing the entities that issue the equity or debt we invest in. We believe that ESG factors can have a material impact on the performance of those entities – and on the economy as a whole – and that a firm commitment to identifying and assessing the risks and opportunities arising from ESG factors is an integral part of good risk management. A consideration of ESG factors is incorporated into our investment analyses across asset classes, including equities, corporate credit, sovereign credit, private equity and real estate, and a tailored approach is taken to address the specific factors in each class. Approach to implementing ESG incorporation practices <ul style="list-style-type: none"> Each of our investment teams identifies and integrates material ESG factors in its standard investment process, with the support of the specialist Responsible Investment team. Fund managers and analysts have access to a wide range of ESG data and research – both third-party and proprietary – which they use to systematically flag potentially material concerns that are then further analyzed to determine their relevance to the investment case. We continuously seek to strengthen the feedback loop that brings together the ESG information and experience we have gained through active ownership activities (i.e., engagement and voting) with our main ESG databases and decision-making processes. We do this by conducting regular cross-team meetings and presentations on relevant ESG issues, including regular thematic webinars; sharing active ownership data across platforms that are accessible to our investment teams; encouraging analysts and portfolio managers to address ESG issues in their meetings with investee companies; and closely involving investment teams when we exercise our right to vote at shareholders’ meetings and design our engagement programs.

Our process is based on the following principles: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Prioritization: In order to identify targets or areas for engagement, the Responsible Investment team regularly monitors the performance of investee companies in managing the ESG issues that present the greatest risks or opportunities in relation to long-term investor value, as well as emerging governance and sustainability trends that could affect groups of companies within a sector or across sectors. This monitoring and research activity significantly overlaps with the proprietary ESG monitoring systems we have set up to support our ESG integration practices. - Setting objectives: Setting specific engagement objectives and tracking results are both necessary in order to assess progress and determine the next steps. Our Responsible Investment team takes the lead in developing objectives, but this is done in close consultation and collaboration with our investment teams in order to ensure that our messages to investee companies are robust and consistent. We strive to clearly communicate to those companies our engagement objectives and expectations, including an outline of what would be a successful outcome - Tracking results: We log and report activity in real time in an online engagement database. This information includes engagement activity, method of engagement, company response and instances of change. We track the progress of our engagements (at issue level for each company), and we itemize successful engagements and related milestones. Our engagement and milestone entries aim to capture the context and materiality of our objectives and the impact of the progress made by the company. - Escalation: If we deem initial engagement efforts to be unsuccessful, we will consider escalation strategies, such as contacting a company's board, using proxy voting, filing a resolution, reducing our exposure or divesting our holdings. - Reporting: We report publicly on our active ownership activities on an annual basis in our Responsible Investment Review • Our internal systems track the level at which engagement takes place. This may be at the board or senior executive level, or with operational or investor relations specialists, depending on the nature of the engagement. We seek board-level engagement where possible. • BMO GAM publishes a detailed report on engagement annually, as well as research on individual engagement topics on our website. We also publish reports on the ESG impact of some of the funds we offer, including our Responsible Global Equity Fund and our Responsible Global Emerging Markets Equity Fund. For clients, we frequently include data and case studies of engagement in our regular reporting.

TRANSPARENT INFORMATION AND FAIR ADVICE FOR CUSTOMERS
FN-AC-270a.1	(1) Number and (2) percentage of covered employees with a record of investment-related investigations, consumer-initiated complaints, private civil litigations, or other regulatory proceedings	Due to the highly regulated nature of its business and its size and longevity in the marketplace, Bank of Montreal covered employees are involved in the ordinary course of business in investment related investigations, consumer- initiative complaints, private civil litigations or other regulatory proceedings pursued against either itself, one of its subsidiaries or directly against such employees. Bank of Montreal provides disclosure regarding material legal proceedings to which its subsidiaries are a party in its annual report to shareholders.
FN-AC-270a.2	Total amount of monetary losses as a result of legal proceedings associated with marketing and communication of financial product-related information to new and returning customers	In fiscal 2020, Bank of Montreal and its affiliates (collectively, “BMO”) do not expect outcomes of any legal proceedings, individually or in aggregate, to have a material adverse effect on the consolidated financial position or the results of operations of the bank, or be material in the context of the SASB framework. See page 206 of the AR: Note 24: Commitments, Guarantees, Pledged Assets, Provisions and Contingent Liabilities.
FN-AC-270a.3	Description of approach to informing customers about products and services	The fair design and sale of financial products and services is addressed in BMO’s Code of Conduct. BMO has also participated in the development of, and is committed to, voluntary commitments and codes of conduct that are intended to protect customers, which are listed on our website BMO complies with all regulations that are intended to protect the interests of customers. Regulators to which our retail banking business is subject include the Financial Consumer Agency of Canada for our Canadian operations, and the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau for our U.S. operations. Regulators to which our wealth management business is subject include the Investment Industry Regulatory Organization of Canada and the Mutual Fund Dealers Association (under the umbrella of the Canadian Securities Administrators) for our Canadian operations, and the Financial Industry Regulatory Authority, the Securities and Exchange Commission, the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency, and the Department of Labor for our U.S. operations. BMO’s compensation and incentive plans are designed to encourage and reward performance aligned with appropriate behaviours. BMO’s performance management process balances what our employees achieve with how they demonstrate our values. Sales force training reinforces these expectations. Sales revenue is generally recognized when a customer uses a product, and may be reversed if a customer cancels or does not use a product. Customers can raise and escalate concerns through defined processes. Regular monitoring of our sales force, along with audits and reviews of our policies and procedures, ensures the continued integrity of our practices and processes. In 2018, the Human Resources Committee of BMO’s Board of Directors reviewed retail incentive compensation plans in conjunction with the joint review of retail sales practices at six Canadian banks conducted by the Financial Consumer Agency of Canada and OSFI.
